The Media Wants You to Believe Trump Tanked the Economy

An antisemitic German says: "Jews should go back to where they came from." Response: They did. That's why you have Israel.

A lot of Republican campaigns are pivoting away from Trump. This is a good thing. He's not on the ballot, and they're going to get his 30% to 40% anyway. So move toward the people who are not going to vote for Donald Trump.

The Supreme Court has refused to intervene in the case of McKenna West. She was a surrogate who fled California and went to Texas so she would not have an abortion. After the birth, she tried to get custody of the baby, but the courts seem to be against her. What's interesting is that she'll probably be sued for a lot of money for not having the abortion. She will probably lose in California.

This is what makes midterm predictions so impossible. On one hand, they're predicting the demise of the Republican Party. On the other, the Minnesota Senate race is neck and neck. We'll have to wait and see what happens. But I promise you Trump has an October surprise.

The Vice-President is now saying people are being cut off from Obamacare because of fraud. My wife and I were put on Obamacare while we were collecting Medicare, and I got tired of trying to get us off it. This went on for over two years. One government agency sent papers to another government agency so that a third could have a fourth pay our premium. Of course, we didn't want it, and we should not have had it.

The Houston public school district has lost 21,000 students over a three-year period due to Trump's illegal immigration crackdown.

I told you that, on fraud, they're going after the little guys, too. They still want the people stealing millions and billions, but a guy in Minnesota pleaded guilty to three felony counts because he had $77,000 in the bank. His restitution is $263,000. So they're going after the little guy, which I agree with.

When Trump pulled White House briefing access for CNN, MSNBC, and Politico, the media response may actually have helped him. They are no longer covering him through the pool. That may be the best news of the election cycle. A lot of us think Donald Trump is way too out there and too accessible. If he would just stop talking, we would do better. We shall see how long it lasts.

If the Arabs had not started wars with us, they would have had a Palestine a long, long time ago. It would have been beautiful—the centerpiece of the Middle East.

A judge ruled that MSNBC, CNN, and Politico must be reinstated because they were not given prior notice and time to fight their exclusion. Trump banned media outlets during his first term, and a judge overturned it because he had not complied with the Administrative Procedure Act. Let's see if they learned the lesson.

Fifty-nine percent of Democrats would favor a military coup to remove Donald Trump from office. A coup.

Why is the price of gas so high? It's not the price of oil. It's the refineries. We have not built a new refinery since 1977. Why? Companies do not want to invest in refineries, which are multiyear projects, and then have a president come in and shut them down. So, it's the Democrats keeping the price of gas high. It's not enough to drill; we do that very well. We have to refine as well.

I keep getting asked about Mike Caruso, the former Palm Beach Clerk of Courts. It's very simple: If they bring additional charges involving more complainants, he's toast. If they don't, his case will be dismissed. Let's see how right I am. This will take a number of months.

One of those maddening things is: when your computer does not accept your password. You go in to change it and enter the password you've been using because the computer won't accept it. Then it tells you that you can't use your last password. How does that make sense?

Brightline, the fast train from Miami to Orlando, has filed for bankruptcy. The trains will keep running. I've watched this project, and I keep asking the same question: Where are they getting the ridership? Let's say it takes three and a half to four hours to drive from Miami to Orlando. The problem with taking the train is that you have to rent a car when you get there. So what has Brightline accomplished? I keep asking, and I have not received an answer.

The Supreme Court is allowing Trump to use his database-cleaning methods. But since we are within 90 days of the election, nobody can be taken off the voter rolls. So this will help next year.

According to a Wall Street Journal poll, the one thing the media has succeeded in doing is getting people to believe Trump tanked the economy. His economic standing is in the 30s. Fortunately, the Democrats run morons who have their own issues.

The late Rabbi Lord Jonathan Sacks said: "Antisemitism is God's reminder that you are Jewish."

It looks like a Republican congresswoman is trying to protect illegal immigrants. This isn't sitting well with Trump. Mr. President, let her do what she needs to do to win re-election. If you interfere, you will lose the seat.

In Gaza, they take a child with a gun and send him from house to house carrying messages and weapons, believing Israel will not shoot him. Everybody knows how this game is played.

Tesla bought a car insurance company in 2022 that insures only Teslas. Premiums appear to be lower than those of other companies. Alan's question: Elon doesn't just sell you the car; he lowers what it costs to own it.

Question: If Islam is a religion of peace, why isn't there peace in the Middle East?

Twenty-two service members killed. Hundreds of U.S. bases damaged. If Iran can do this much damage without a nuclear bomb, think how much damage it could do with one.

Trump will do a 30-day blitz to elect or reelect candidates. Some candidates don't want to be near him, and that's okay. Figure out what works in your district and go with it.

Meme of the Week:
I offered to help cook. My assignment was to stay out of the kitchen.

Bonus Meme of the Week:
My smart watch congratulated me on reaching my goal. I'd been looking for my glasses.
