It Was a BLOODBATH

So last night was a bloodbath for Republicans. I'm not going into details. What we have is "Trump Fatigue Syndrome." People are tired of him. He's been on the scene for more than 10 years. It's not enough to energize your base. That's your 34%. The coalition fell apart. Losing the Senate means you can't get your judges or Cabinet nominees approved. I talked about Trump resigning. I know it sounds crazy, but if he does it now, they can get the VP approved. In January, they can't. And now 67 votes are on the table for removal.

The good news is that being in the minority lets you blame the other party for failures, and that puts us in a good position for 2028. 2028 is critical because of the 2030 census. If Republicans win, illegal immigrants aren't counted. If Democrats win, illegal immigrants are given citizenship.

The other option is that the Trump brand may be so damaged that Marco throws his hat in the ring. He should resign as Secretary of State now, and DeSantis should take that slot while Republicans still have a majority.

Trump says that after the rout, if he'd been on the ballot, he would have won by a landslide. I'm sorry, Mr. President. America suffers from "Trump Fatigue Syndrome." That is too much time in front of the microphone. Do you want proof? When you offered $5000 if the Republicans kept both houses, no one believed you would do it.

If Trump had stayed out of the Texas race, Cornyn would have won and dragged Abbott over the finish line.

The problem with Iran is that the pause should have been two weeks, not six months. And Trump never sold the public on why we were in Iran. The biggest thing he had to do was explain why we were there and how long we'd be there.

Rome was not built in a day. But Palestine was. December 2, 1964, to be exact.

Apple News promoted more than 80 stories that negatively framed Republicans leading up to the midterms, with zero positive stories about the GOP.

I get asked why I didn't report more on Israeli elections. The answer is very simple. I'm an American. I don't vote in Israeli elections, and I consider it an internal matter for the Israelis. It's that simple.

In 1992, Al Gore predicted that within two decades, Florida would lose 60% of its population due to climate change. Today, 34 years later, Florida's population is 425% higher than it was in 1992.

Flávio Bolsonaro ran for President of Brazil. The election was stolen, and everybody could see it. They took his passports, and he fled to the United States. At 5:00, after the polls had closed in most areas, Lula's former lawyer, a Supreme Court judge, allowed two extra hours for voting. In those two hours, the fraud was committed. In Brazil, voting is all electronic. There's no way to get a piece of paper to prove you voted for a candidate. During the primaries, every vote for a right-wing candidate became a vote for Lula in the general election. What are the odds of that?

With Flávio Bolsonaro coming to the United States, the keyboard warriors went to town. They said the only person letting criminals into the United States is Donald Trump. I asked them if they were really afraid of Flávio Bolsonaro walking down the street and mugging them. Of course, they have no problems with the murderers and rapists from third-world countries.

According to The Gateway Pundit, in Detroit in 2020, Democrats put up cardboard boxes to block observers' view in the elections office. [You also said it wasn't the police who put up the boxes.] And that's when the election changed. I won't go into the details, but every time someone asks whether 2020 was stolen, a new piece of evidence emerges that says it was.

Mel Gibson says, "Japan and Germany got totally destroyed in World War II, but their kids didn't become terrorists. Stop making excuses."

I saw a guy in Publix wearing a Medicare for All shirt. I asked, "How does it work?" He said, "I don't know, but Bernie Sanders and his experts have said it works." That's what talking to Democrats is about. Nothing.

This is a public service announcement. This time of year, a number of clients who left Our Medicare and insurance business, because they were promised a food card, money back, etc., came back to us because those promises were never true. A good agent has everything available. The guys who calls you to get a sale, won't do any servicing. Need an ID card? Three hours on hold with Humana. Want to change doctors? Two and a half hours on hold with United. A good agent handles that for you. We'd like to be your agent, but if we can't, make sure you have a good one who services your plan as well as selling it.

Public service announcement. Did you know your AAA Premier membership includes home lockout service? They'll open your front door if you're locked out. I didn't know that, and I've had AAA for ages.

In Virginia, the governor restored voting rights to a dog that died five years ago. I'm being serious.

Let me make the legal case against Ilhan Omar. Lying on your immigration application has no expiration date. There's no statute of limitations. It's that simple.

Two 14-year-old Palestinians walked into a supermarket and stabbed an off-duty Israeli soldier. They're the children you hear about who have been killed.

There's a religion called "Humanist." A University of Kentucky employee received an accommodation allowing him to avoid using AI at work because it would violate his religious principles. I'm still scratching my head over this one.

In Seattle, there was a 254-unit, low-income apartment complex. Seattle passed pro-renter rules, and as a result, the complex went from collecting 94% of its rent to collecting 44%. Now the courts have ruled that the owners have the right to make the case that this qualified as an illegal taking. Whenever the government helps, it makes things worse.

The guy with the Medicare for All shirt at the supermarket kept trying to change the subject to Israel, Trump, Amendment 3, and so on. I just kept saying, "We'll talk about Medicare for All and nothing else." That drives them crazy. Don't let them hopscotch from one subject to another on you. Pick a subject and stay on it, because they can't.

Does God exist? We've all seen the video of the plane that turned into a missile and crashed in the street in Palm Beach County. Why didn't the plane hit the mobile home complex? Why did it not hit cars in the road? Was it luck or was it God?

Here in Florida, Byron Donalds had Trump's endorsement, so he didn't have to debate. Debates would have made him a better candidate. He'll win, but he would have been a better candidate.

It appears that Trump will end the Memorandum of Understanding with Israel, which included $3.8 billion, at the end of 2026. I think this is great for Israel because then it can compete with the United States, and the U.S. will buy from Israel.
It also makes it easier for Israel to sell to Arab countries without U.S. approval.

Although the Congress can investigate Trump and his family, they can't prosecute. That is the DOJ's job. Under Biden, they could prosecute, but Trump's in control.

Meme of the Week:
My grandson asked what we did before GPS.
I told him we drove past the exit and gave each other time to think about whose fault it was.

Bonus Meme of the Week:
My husband took me back to the restaurant where he proposed.
I remembered what he said.
He remembered what he ordered.
